Re: Your Citi credit card account ending in <Last 4 digits of Account Number>

On November 4, 2013 we discovered that a Citibank employee improperly recorded certain personal information that appeared on your account Citi credit card account. The employee had access to your personal information, which included your name, address, phone number, account number, social security number and date of birth. This employee has been terminated by Citibank and the matter has been turned over to law enforcement.

We began investigating the incident as soon as we learned of it, and based on our investigation, we determined that your account was not misused by the employee. As a precaution, we recommend that you closely review your account and the information provided in this letter for some steps that you may take to protect yourself against any potential misuse of your personal information. We apologize for any inconvenience this incident may have caused. We take very seriously the security of your personal information.

As a precaution, we have arranged for you at your option to enroll in a credit monitoring service provided by Identity Theft Victim Assistance Center[®] at no cost to you for at least the next 12 months. We recommend that you take the following steps to monitor for any potential misuse of your personal information:

- You should remain vigilant during the next 12 to 24 months for incidents of fraud and identity theft, including by regularly reviewing your account statements and monitoring free credit reports. Promptly report suspected identity theft or fraud to us at the number on the back of your card. Citi also offers free personalized identity theft solutions to assist Citi customers in taking appropriate steps if they believe they are a victim of identity theft.

- To learn more about protecting yourself from identity theft and to report incidents of fraud and identity theft, you may call or write to the Federal Trade Commission (at the contact information on the following page), or your local law enforcement agency or state Attorney General.
- To protect your credit information, you may place a fraud alert on your credit report file by calling just one of the three nationwide consumer reporting agencies listed below. As soon as that agency processes your fraud alert, it will notify the other two agencies, which then must also place fraud alerts on your credit report file. A fraud alert can make it more difficult for someone to get credit in your name because it lets creditors know to follow certain procedures to protect you before opening new accounts. However, it also may delay your ability to obtain credit.
- In addition, you may also contact the nationwide consumer reporting agencies regarding if and how you may place a security freeze on your credit report to prohibit a credit reporting agency from releasing information from your credit report without your prior written authorization. You may obtain additional information from the Federal Trade Commission and the consumer reporting agencies about fraud alerts and security freezes.
- Under Federal law, you are entitled to obtain one free copy of your credit report every 12 months from each of the three nationwide consumer reporting agencies. In addition, you may have any information contained in your credit report that resulted from fraud deleted. You can obtain a free copy of your credit report from each of the three nationwide consumer reporting agencies by calling 1-877-322-8228, contacting online at www.annualcreditreport.com, or writing to the addresses found on the page titled "Important Contact Information".

If you have questions or concerns about this, or if we can be of further assistance to you, please do not hesitate to call us toll free at 1-800-950-5114.

Sincerely,

Matthew Jenkins
Director of Operations
