Executive Summary

On November 30, 2011, New Hampshire Liquor Commission Store #6 began a move from its old location to a new location across the shopping plaza on Islington Street in Portsmouth. The move took three days to complete. Liquor Commission employees present at the store communicated to their supervisors in Concord that they discovered an excess amount of wine during the move for which no inventory records could be found. The inventory issue involved wine only, not spirits. Commission Chairman Joseph Mollica requested former Director of Store Operations, Peter Engel, to physically segregate the excess wine pending an audit. Engel has no recollection of receiving such a request and store employees did not segregate any wine. On December 7, 2011, an unannounced audit took place at Store #6 and a full bottle count inventory was conducted. The results of that audit showed that most of the reportedly excess wine was no longer present in Store #6, and the matter was referred to the Liquor Commission's Enforcement Bureau for an investigation.

Six months later, the Enforcement Bureau completed its investigation and provided a written report to the Liquor Commissioners. The report concluded that concerns regarding missing wine were attributable to "poor inventory controls" rather than criminal conduct. According to Liquor Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Michael Milligan, Chief Eddie Edwards of the Liquor Enforcement Bureau advised them that the Rockingham County Attorney's Office had completed a review of the investigation and that no criminal conduct had occurred. Chief Edwards stated he did relay to Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Milligan that the County Attorney's Office did not think any criminal conduct had occurred, but he denied representing that the County Attorney's Office was in possession of a file and was reviewing a file over a period of time. According to the Rockingham County Attorney's Office, they never received a case file for review from the Liquor Enforcement Bureau and only had informal, preliminary discussions with the Deputy Chief of the Liquor Enforcement Bureau about its investigation.

The Commissioners, dissatisfied with the Enforcement Bureau's investigation and written report, requested additional investigation by the Office of the Attorney General. This Office, assisted by the New Hampshire State Police, conducted in excess of 35 witness interviews. Investigators thoroughly examined Liquor Commission inventory records, Store #6 documentation regarding the move, product tracking spreadsheets, Liquor Commission emails and the Bureau of Enforcement's investigative materials.

We conclude that no wine ever went missing from Store #6. As discussed in detail in the attached report, Liquor Commission employees misinterpreted a spreadsheet created during the move by the Commission's Strategic Account Manager, Nicole Inkpen, of Constellation Wines. Liquor Commission employees interpreted the spreadsheet as an inventory of excess wine in the store. However, that spreadsheet was not a documentation of actual wine on the premises. It was an itemization of sales tags that had no direct correlation to wine actually in the store.

Misunderstandings about this spreadsheet were reported up to leadership at the Liquor Commission and led to growing concerns that excess wine was first present at the store and then subsequently disappeared. A careful review of Liquor Commission inventory records dispels this misunderstanding and does not reveal any unaccounted-for wine ever present at the store in the first place. Accordingly, there is no evidence that any criminal conduct occurred during the Store #6 move in early December of 2011.

Introduction

The Office of the Attorney General and the Major Crime Unit of the New Hampshire State Police conducted an investigation into the allegation that a significant quantity of wine product went missing from the State Liquor Commission's Store #6 in Portsmouth in early December of 2011. This investigation included interviews of civilian and law enforcement witnesses, reviews of Liquor Commission inventory records, to include shipping, receiving, sale and transfer records, a review of the Liquor Enforcement Bureau report of the same topic, and reviews of inventory controls and procedures within the State Liquor Commission.

The findings and conclusions contained in this report are based on investigative reports, interview reports, the transcripts of witness interviews, the inventory data provided by the State Liquor Commission, and conversations with investigators. Witnesses interviewed were Chairman Joseph Mollica, Commissioner Michael Milligan, Nicole Inkpen, Gordon Heins, Richard O'Brien, Nicole Brassard, George Tsiopras, Kelly Mathews, Janice Brown, Robert Coleman, Karen Day-Covert, Christina Demers, John Reardon, Randy Durling, Brian Law, Chris Bovio, Charline Everson, Cassandra Denoncourt, Andy Davis, Dwayne Dubois, Stephen Katsanos, Heidi Mulder, Kylie Fritz, Matthew Couture, Donna Slavit, Jennie Willet, Linda Duval, Margo Bartz, Bill Smith, Chief Eddie Edwards, Deputy Chief Scott Dunn, Rockingham County Attorney James Reams, Deputy Rockingham County Attorney Thomas Reid, Assistant Rockingham County Attorney Patricia Conway, and Rockingham County Attorney's Office Investigator Arthur Wiggin.

This incident was first brought to the attention of the Office of the Attorney General on June 11, 2012, by Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Milligan. At that time, the Liquor Commissioners presented this office with the investigation that had been conducted and completed by the Liquor Enforcement Bureau and requested assistance from this office. The matter was then referred to the Criminal Bureau and a full investigation ensued. The New Hampshire Liquor Commission cooperated fully with that investigation. New Hampshire Liquor Commission personnel complied with all requests made of them by the State Police and the Attorney General's Office.

Incident Overview

On November 30, 2011, Store #6 began a move from its old location to a new location across the shopping plaza on Islington Street in Portsmouth. During the course of the move, personnel at Store #6 communicated to their supervisors in Concord that there was an excess amount of wine product discovered during the move for which no inventory records could be found.¹ Accounts differ as to whether Chairman Mollica ordered those involved in the move to segregate this excess physical product. Regardless, any physical product that was considered excess was not segregated in the manner requested. Subsequently, on December 7, 2011, an unannounced audit took place at the new Store #6 location and a full bottle count inventory was conducted by Liquor Commission employees. The results of that first audit indicated that the majority of the reportedly excess wine product was no longer present in Store #6. It was therefore believed that the product somehow went missing and the matter was then referred to the Enforcement Bureau and a criminal investigation began. The Commissioners were under the impression that the investigation was thereafter forwarded to the Rockingham County Attorney's Office for review. Rather, the Enforcement Bureau stated that a meeting with the County Attorney's Office took place and that it focused not on the missing wine, but on an allegation that one case of wine had been transferred to Store #6 at the request of then-Commissioner Mark Bodi and that it was being held there at Bodi's request until it went on sale. The Enforcement Bureau stated that it never provided the County Attorney's Office with a case file. The County Attorney's Office indicated that the issue was brought up during a meeting with Deputy Chief Dunn on a separate matter. The County Attorney's Office further maintained that they were never provided with an investigative file and never made a final determination about the merits of this case and whether or not any criminal acts occurred. The Enforcement Bureau agreed that they were told that if additional information or evidence was developed, that the matter should be brought back to the County Attorney's Office. This did not occur. Commissioners Mollica and Milligan nevertheless reported that they were told a number of times over the course of many weeks by Chief Eddie Edwards that the County Attorney's Office was reviewing the matter. Eventually, the Commissioners reported that they were told by Chief Edwards that the County Attorney's Office had finished its review and concluded that no criminal acts occurred. Chief Edwards disputes this account instead maintains that he did not make these statements to Commissioners Mollica and Milligan. The Enforcement Bureau's investigation was then eventually completed and provided to the Commissioners approximately six months after the Store #6 move. The executive summary attached to the Enforcement Bureau's investigation concluded that the missing wine was likely due to an inventory issue and that no criminal acts occurred. See Enforcement Bureau Executive Summary (attached hereto as Appendix A). It made no mention of a review by the County Attorney's Office. Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Milligan were dissatisfied with the investigation conducted by the Enforcement Bureau, and subsequently requested that the Office of the Attorney General investigate any criminal conduct associated with the Store #6 move. Shortly thereafter, beginning in July of 2012, various media outlets in New Hampshire began reporting that 300 cases of high-end wine went missing from Store #6 in Portsmouth and that the missing wine was valued at approximately $100,000.00. The Attorney General's investigation in this matter was limited to the allegation that excess wine went missing from Store #6 and did not include a review of the Liquor Commission's internal policies and procedures.

This report summarizes the Attorney General's findings and conclusions. For the reasons discussed in detail below, the Attorney General has concluded that no wine product went missing from the new Store #6 location following the store move, and therefore no criminal conduct occurred.

Factual Findings

Events Leading Up to the Store #6 Move

A liquor store move requires a significant amount of preparation and planning on the part of the Liquor Commission and its employees.² Relevant to this investigation, a store move necessitates planning the new physical layout of the new store including the placement of wine product on the retail shelves. Thus, a “planogram” is created that details the physical layout of the wine section of the retail floor. See New Store #6 Planogram (attached hereto as Appendix B). Along with that a “set list” is created that details the wine products that will be carried in the new store and their respective code numbers which are assigned by the Liquor Commission. See New Store #6 Set List (attached hereto as Appendix C). The set list identifies wine products by their name as well as their “product code.” A product code a unique number identifier assigned to a product by the Liquor Commission.³ Every product carried by the Liquor Commission has a corresponding product code and products are tracked in inventory by this code. The set list also describes the physical location of each bottle of wine on the retail shelves as well as the number of “facings” it will have on that shelf. For example, a particular product may be included in the new set that will be on the top row of a specific shelving unit and have a facing of four, meaning the section for that particular product will be four bottles wide. Therefore, the set list is limited by the amount of shelf space available in the new store location. To put together such a plan, the product inventory in the store must be regularly tracked so that those who are creating the new set list can plan for a certain amount of product to keep the shelves full. For the new Store #6 the set list included 1,346 different wine products with their corresponding product codes. This wine set for the new Store #6 was smaller than that in the old Store #6 which carried 1,591 different wine products with their corresponding product codes. Primarily responsible for the creation of the new Store #6 set list and planogram were Nicole Inkpen (formerly Terzopolos) a Strategic Account Manager with Constellation Wines, and Gordon Heins, Wine Program Specialist for the New Hampshire Liquor Commission.

² No written protocols exist for a store move. However Chairman Mollica informed investigators that the Commission will have written protocols for a store move effective January 1, 2013.

The preparation for the Store #6 move began in August of 2011. As Heins and Inkpen were working on the creation of the wine set list and planogram for the new Store #6, store personnel were sent transfer lists on multiple occasions which detailed wine product that was to be transferred out of the old Store #6 location to other Liquor Commission stores. In addition, new item ordering was also turned off for Store #6 beginning in August of 2011 to reduce the amount of new wine product that would appear in the store prior to the move. This is typically done prior to a store move to reduce the amount of product that must be physically moved. It is hoped that a store will sell down or even sell out of a product prior to the move, and that store is not replenished with the product until after the move. This directive would prove difficult to enforce with Store #6 in part because it is the largest licensee store in the state due to the number of restaurants in the Portsmouth area.⁴ Therefore, Store #6 did continue to order new wine products between August of 2011 and the store move. This product was not planned for inclusion in the new set but it was tracked and accounted for through the electronic inventory system.

On October 27, 2011, Heins sent an email reporting that the new Store #6 wine set list had been completed and would be sent to the marketing department the next day so that "product captions" could be created. Product captions are the white tags that state the name of the product, its product code, and the product price. The product captions are located on a liquor store's retail shelves directly below the corresponding product. Therefore, although the store move would not occur until November

30, 2011, over one month later, the set list was finalized so that the product captions could be created for the new store. It should be understood, by those involved in moving the store, that the final set list and the physical product on hand at the time of a move will differ to some degree. A store is still operating and selling products up until the day of the move, and in the case of the Store #6 move, the old store location was still open to the public and selling product on the first day of the move. However, these differences in physical product inventory are accounted for in the move because the store's inventory is tracked by Inkpen up to the day of the move.

In the days before the move and prior to any product being physically moved to the new Store #6 location, Heins placed the wine product captions on the retail shelves in their planned locations in the new Store #6. This was done, as it is in every store move, so that when the product arrived from the old store location it could be placed directly on the retail shelves in its planned position in the new set. As discussed above, the old Store #6 location remained open to the public and operating through the first day of the move. During that time the employees of Store #6 were also finishing packing up product in preparation for the move. The wine products that had been displayed on the retail floor in the old Store #6 location were re-packed in boxes, which typically hold either twelve or six bottles of wine. The label on the box would often not correspond with the actual product packed inside, and a box could be re-packed with a number of different types of wines.

Separate from the product captions, and also prior to the move, Store #6 received a stack of sale tags from Concord for products on sale between November 20, 2011 and January 2, 2012. Generally, these sale tags are placed over the white product caption tags when a product is on sale so that a customer will be able to visually see what is on sale in the store. Because of the upcoming move, Store #6 did not put its sale tags out on the floor in the old Store #6. Products that were on sale were still sold at the sale price if purchased, but the tags were not going to be placed over product captions until after the move. At the time, the Liquor Commission's process for distributing sale tags to the store entailed sending every store a sale tag for every product on sale statewide.⁵ It was therefore the responsibility of the individual stores to cull out those sales tags that were for products that the store did not carry in its inventory. As a result, Store #6 had received a sale tag for every product on sale statewide for the time period between November 20, 2011 and January 2, 2012. There were a significant number of items on sale during this timeframe.⁶ During her interview with investigators, Janice Brown, the then acting manager of Store #6, stated that prior to the move she brought the entire stack of wine sale tags home to her residence and on Thanksgiving night sorted and culled them from memory in preparation for placing them on the retail shelves at the new store location. Brown admitted that there was a process by which she could have printed out a report of the wines the store had on hand at the time, but she instead chose to go through the sale tags relying solely on her memory of the product present in the old Store #6. While other store managers have confirmed that this is an accepted practice, Brown also stated that the prior Store #6 manager, Robert Coleman, had always sorted the sale tags for wine and that this had been her first time sorting the wine sale tags. Brown stated that Randy Durling, a Store #6 clerk, had the responsibility of sorting the sale tags for the spirits prior to the move.

The Store #6 Move

Present during the Store #6 move were Director of Store Operations Peter Engel, Region Two Supervisor Rick O'Brien, Brown, Store #6 employees Durling, John Reardon, Steve Katsanos, and Kylie

⁶ Between November 28, 2011 and January 2, 2012, 11,599 different wine products or codes were on sale with the New Hampshire Liquor Commission.

Fritz, and Store #38 Manager Matthew Couture⁷ as well as a number of other Liquor Commission employees that were brought in to assist with the physical movement of product.⁸

By all accounts the Store #6 move was utterly chaotic. Each individual, interviewed by investigators, who had participated in the move described that the old Store #6 location had a significant amount of physical product present. Thus, moving that product into the backroom at the new, smaller, Store #6 location created a situation where there was little room to move around and much less room to organize items as they arrived from the old store.⁹ The space issue, when coupled with the difficulty of sorting mixed cases that contained a variety of wine products, created an atmosphere of frustration and confusion. Under these circumstances it was often difficult for those involved in unpacking the product and stocking the shelves to even locate the products that had been planned for the new set and that had a corresponding product caption on the retail shelves.

On the first day of the move, as others were tasked with different responsibilities, Brown began the job of matching the sale tags she had sorted with their corresponding product captions that Heins had previously placed on the retail shelves. At some point during that day, she reported to O'Brien that there were a number of wine sale tags that did not correspond with captions on the retail shelves. Brown was insistent with O'Brien that these wines were physically present and carried by the store. Engel was also made aware of the issue at the time but stated to investigators that initially he was not particularly concerned because the move was still in progress. Both Engel and O'Brien also stated to investigators that the Store #6 move came shortly before they had to be involved in the move for Store

⁸ The accounts provided by these named individuals regarding the move and the issue arising with excess product were consistent and therefore the Liquor Commission employees that were present as laborers solely to assist with the physical moving of product were not interviewed as part of this investigation.

#68 in Hampton. Engel and O'Brien both stated that they felt the need to complete the physical move of product at Store #6 quickly so that they could move on to Store #68. Therefore, any issues that arose could be sorted out at the new Store #6 after all of the product had been moved.

Brown contacted Heins either via email or text message and asked that he stop by the store. When Heins arrived at the new Store #6 location he was handed a stack of approximately 300 wine sale tags by O'Brien who stated that these wine products (as represented by the sale tags) had not been included in the set. Heins briefly looked at the tags and confirmed that, for the most part, the wines had not been included in the new set. However, in flipping through the stack he recognized some sale tags for products that were in the new set. Those sale tags were subsequently pulled out of the stack and eventually placed over their corresponding wine product captions on the retail shelves. Heins then contacted his supervisor, Brassard, and requested that Inkpen be at the new Store #6 location the next day to sort through the sale tag issue. Brown remained insistent that there was physical product present that corresponded to these sale tags but no search for the product was conducted during the first day of the move and Brown did not physically show anyone any of that wine product.

Separate and distinct from the issue regarding sale tags, a second issue arose during the move where a significant amount of wine product was physically present which had not been included as part of the new set list. As the move occurred and boxes of wine arrived at the new Store #6, Heins and other employees were filling in the retail shelves with the wine product planned for the new set. However, at times Heins and others reported coming across bottles of wine that did not have a corresponding product caption on the retail shelves. As previously discussed, this was not uncommon nor should it have been unanticipated. Both Heins and Inkpen should have been aware that although new item ordering had been turned off for Store #6, new items had nevertheless been ordered by Store #6, in part to keep up with the large licensee business done by the store. These products that were not planned for the new set were tracked by Inkpen in reports that were produced up through December 1, 2011. See Master List as of December 1, 2011 (attached hereto as Appendix D). During this process of stocking the shelves, these bottles of wine that were not part of the new set were sent back to the backroom area. This was product that fell into one of a number of categories, it was either: (1) new since new item ordering had been turned off; (2) a transfer addition; (3) an item slated for transfer out of Store #6 but the transfer had not yet occurred; or (4) a “promotional only” item. While both Inkpen and Heins should have been aware that there were wine products that were present that were not part of the new set, there was nevertheless a significant amount of that product present. Inkpen’s Master List as of December 1, 2011, showed that there were 663 bottles of wine present at the time of the move that fit into one of the four categories listed above. See Appendix D (Master List). That is, there were 663 bottles of wine that were not included in the new set list and did not have a corresponding product caption on the retail shelves. That this excess product was accounted for and tracked in inventory was not necessarily communicated to others involved in the store move such as Engel and O’Brien, nor was it communicated to Brassard or Chairman Mollica in Concord. Yet, because these bottles were all electronically present in the Store #6 inventory and accounted for, nothing out of the ordinary was occurring. In addition to the 663 bottles that did not have product captions on the retail shelves, there were additional wines physically present in the store that were designated as “Backroom Only” products or Eurocave products.¹⁰ There were 37 bottles of wine present in Store #6 on December 1, 2011 (see Appendix D) that were designated for the Eurocave. These products had corresponding product captions in the Eurocave area. However, there were 1,591 bottles of wine present in Store #6 on December 1, 2011 (see Appendix D) that were designated as Backroom Only. These wine products did not have corresponding product captions on the retail shelves, nor did they have product captions for where they were to be shelved in the backroom area. Therefore, a total 2,254 bottles of wine were present and accounted for in Store #6 on December 1, 2011, that did not have corresponding product captions on the retail shelves because these products were not specifically part of the new set. With such a significant amount of wine present which had not been included in the new set it is understandable that those present during the move felt that there was an inventory problem because there were several thousand of bottles of wine that did not have a place on the retail shelves.

When Heins or others filling in the shelves would come across a product that did not have a set location on the retail shelves in the new store, it would be sent to the backroom and placed on an "L" shaped section of shelving or placed in shopping carts in the backroom. Engel, Brown, and O'Brien all acknowledged during their interviews that this was the process followed with wines that could not be matched with a product caption on the retail floor and all stated that a significant amount of wine ended up in the backroom on the shelving or in shopping carts. Brown stated that at one point during the move there were eight to ten shopping carts in the backroom area that were each filled with bottles of wine. As the move progressed and the retail shelves started filling in, some of this wine was placed on the retail floor, either because it turned out that the product was actually planned for the new set but the caption location had not initially been found, or because Heins "cut-in" or made room for it in on the shelves.¹¹ For example, Heins specifically recalled creating room for product code 27111, a Masi Amarone which had initially been designated as backroom only (and therefore not planned for the new set) because upon seeing the product he determined that an Amarone should be included for sale on the retail floor as no wines fitting that category had been made part of the new set. Brown also stated that during the course of the move Heins had requested and received additional product captions from ¹¹ There was empty space on the retail shelves because many of the wines that had been planned for the new set were not physically present at the time of the move as they had been sold out prior to the move. These wines were also tracked on Inkpen's Master List. They are labeled as "Planned for New Set" and "Missing." See Appendix D.

Concord for wines that had not initially been included in the set list but which he cut-in to the retail shelves.

When that process was completed over the course of the three day move, those present during the move all stated that approximately 100-200 bottles of product remained on that shelf section in the backroom which did not have corresponding product captions on the retail shelves in the new store. By all accounts that product remained in that area following the move and throughout the two subsequent audit counts that occurred on December 7, 2011 and December 15, 2011. Since that time the product was reportedly either cut-in to the retail shelves and sold or transferred out. For example, six bottles of product code 38483 were physically present at the time of the move (and present in the electronic inventory) but the product was considered new to the store since new item ordering had been turned off, and it did not have a product caption on the retail shelves. Nevertheless, it remained in the store and two bottles were subsequently sold on December 11, 2011. As another example, thirty-six bottles of product code 15915 were physically present at the time of the move (and present in the electronic inventory) but the product had been on Store #6's transfer list. However, the product was not transferred out prior to the move as had been ordered and remained in the store. One bottle was subsequently sold on December 25, 2011. These products were excess in the sense that they had not been included in the new set list, but they were not products that could not be accounted for both electronically and physically nor were they products that ever disappeared.

On the second day of the move, December 1, 2011, Inkpen arrived as requested and was handed the stack of sale tags (which had been sorted by Brown based solely on her memory) by Heins. Thereafter, she proceeded to create a spreadsheet of the sale tags which included certain descriptors such as the product code and name of the wine product. See Sale Tag Spreadsheet (attached hereto as Appendix E). On this color-coded spreadsheet Inkpen also recorded the order in which each sale tag appeared in the stack of sale tags she was handed. The price of the wines listed on this spreadsheet range from $3.99 to $229.00 per bottle. As Heins had the day prior, Inkpen was able to determine that a number of the wine sale tags did correspond to items that were planned for the new set. On the spreadsheet she created, these items are highlighted in green as "Planned for New Set" or in yellow as "Eurocave" products. Inkpen also discovered that there were sale tags that corresponded to wines that were not planned for the new set but were nevertheless present in the Store #6 inventory either because they were new items that were ordered after new item ordering was turned off or because they were designated as backroom only items, and were still present in both the physical and electronic inventory. For example, wine product code 13936, a Chardon-K Longball wine, often referred to as a Red Sox specialty wine, appeared on Inkpen's spreadsheet because it was on sale at the time and was also noted by Inkpen to be present in the store's inventory at the time of the move. However, as recorded on Inkpen's Master List (see Appendix D) code 13936 was new since new item ordering had been turned off and therefore was not planned as part of the new wine set list. Brown recalled that the bottles of this wine that were present were placed on the backroom shelving section because they did not have a corresponding product caption on the retail shelves. Brown also stated that the wine was subsequently sold during the month of December. Inventory records corroborate her account and show that four bottles of 13936 were sold on December 4, 2011. Five bottles remained in the store's electronic inventory through the month of December and the product eventually sold out on April 1, 2012.

For the remaining sale tags on her spreadsheet, Inkpen discovered that they were not present in the current electronic inventory. Nevertheless, according to Inkpen, Brown remained insistent that the products were physically present. Inkpen stated she and Brown conducted a "spot check" of these remaining sale tags codes on the second day of the Store #6 move. Both Inkpen and Brown described to investigators that Inkpen was located in the retail section of the store with her laptop. Inkpen would call out a code number (not a product name) to Brown and Brown would search for the wine in the backroom area. It is important to again note that a Liquor Commission product code number is not put anywhere on an individual bottle of wine. Further, as previously discussed, that product code number would also not necessarily be on the box or case that the wine was packaged in due to the move. In total, according to both Inkpen and Brown they spot-checked approximately twenty wine product codes. Inkpen stated to investigators that Brown was able to locate a physical bottle that corresponded to the product code that Inkpen had read in most, but not all, instances. Inkpen conceded that she did not physically see each of the bottles Brown reported she had located and that no physical count was conducted of bottles present that corresponded with the approximately twenty product codes that were spot checked. In addition, Inkpen did not contemporaneously record on her spreadsheet which product codes were spot checked or for which product codes Brown reported she had located physical bottles. According to Inkpen, the wine that Brown was reporting to Inkpen that she located was not separated or segregated in any fashion in the backroom area. For this reason, it is not possible to determine, which, if any, of the product codes on Inkpen's spreadsheet that were not in the electronic inventory were actually physically present on December 1, 2011, in the new Store #6 location.

In Brown's interview she contradicted Inkpen's statement and stated that Inkpen had not been calling out product codes that corresponded to the wine sale tags, but rather was calling out product codes she was reading off of the set list. This would mean that according to Brown, Inkpen was calling off product codes for wine products that were included in the new set list and that were therefore supposed to be physically present. Brown also stated she was able to find most of the products Inkpen was calling out and when she found a product she would put the bottle on the retail shelf above its product caption. Brown stated that there were product captions for some of these products, meaning that they had been included in the new set list, but for others she located there were no corresponding product captions. Brown stated that she believed that the bottles that Inkpen had her looking for were products that were included in the new set list but for whatever reason no product caption had been created for some of them. Brown stated that because the product captions are made centrally in Concord, it was her experience that it was not uncommon for the store to receive products but not receive the correct corresponding product captions from Concord. As discussed above, Brown reiterated that during the course of the move, Heins had requested and received additional captions for products and cut them into the retail shelves.

Inkpen only had a specific memory of Brown locating one of the wines she had called out, a single bottle of Korbel product that Inkpen stated to investigators she had actually seen. Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet includes four Korbel products. Inkpen believed the Korbel bottle she saw corresponded with a product code on her sale tag spreadsheet. However, because the Korbel bottle that Inkpen recalled Brown found was not separated or segregated it is unknown which Korbel product it actually corresponded to. The Korbel products that appear on the sale tag spreadsheet are product codes 6195, 6481, 8283, and 24889. According to inventory records, code 6195 had not been present in Store #6's electronic inventory since it was sold through on November 16, 2003. 16 bottles of code 6481 were shipped out of Store #6 on August 21, 2011, and the product was not restocked. Inventory records show that code 82893 was sold through on May 22, 2011. Code 24889 was sold through on August 10, 1997. However, it should also be noted that three other Korbel products were included in the new set list, specifically product codes 8288, 8342, and 14771, and they were each present in Store #6's inventory at that time.

When Inkpen and Brown concluded their spot-check, the spreadsheet Inkpen had created, along with the Master List, were emailed to Brassard in Concord. Brassard stated that she was not provided a bottle count or a case count of the wines on Inkpen's color-coded sale tag spreadsheet and therefore she did not calculate an estimated value for this wine. Brassard does not know why media reports have stated that 300 cases of wine were missing. The codes on the sale tag spreadsheet were then evaluated by Business Administrator Christina Demers and Inventory Accountant Karen Day-Covert to determine if there was a glitch in their computer system. They converted Inkpen's color-coded Excel spreadsheet to a proprietary list generated through the Liquor Commission's inventory system. Demers and Day-Covert then concluded that the issue was not system related. Demers stated that she was never provided with a bottle count or a case count of the wine but was only given the product codes. Demers further stated she was not provided an estimated value for the wine and did not ascribe a value to the wine due to the lack of a count. Demers stated she does not know why media reports have stated that 300 cases of wine went missing. In addition, on the final day of the move, December 2, 2011, Engel contacted Liquor Chairman Mollica and discussed the issue. Chairman Mollica recalled that this was an in-person meeting in Concord and that Engel reported to him that approximately 300 cases of wine were physically present in Store #6 but were not in the electronic inventory. Chairman Mollica recalled Engel describing the wine product as being peppered through the inventory. In speaking with Engel, Chairman Mollica was under the impression that an inventory, that is, a complete bottle count, occurred as product left the old Store #6 location en route to the new store. He recalled that Engel stated that it was during this inventory process that the allegedly excess product was discovered. Chairman Mollica also recalled Engel told him that the excess product had been segregated in the old Store #6 location. In his interview with investigators, and in his interview with the Enforcement Bureau, Engel stated that he did not communicate to Chairman Mollica that 300 cases were an issue, but rather told Chairman Mollica that approximately 200 bottles were an issue. Nevertheless, Chairman Mollica maintained that Engel had stated that approximately 300 cases of wine were at issue. At that time Chairman Mollica also received from Brassard the color-coded spreadsheet created by Inkpen as well as the converted list that was generated by Demers and Day-Covert. Chairman Mollica was under the impression that the color-coded spreadsheet was a contemporaneous recording of the excess physical wine product that those present during the Store #6 move had seen.

Subsequent Store #6 Unannounced Audits

After Chairman Mollica spoke with Engel, he contacted Liquor Commission Chief Financial Officer George Tsiopras and asked that an audit team be sent to Store #6 as soon as possible. Tsiopras was not able to put together an audit team for that weekend and the first unannounced audit of Store #6 did not occur until December 7, 2011.

On December 7, 2011 and December 15, 2011, unannounced audits were conducted at Store #6 by a team of Liquor Commission employees from the Concord headquarters. Present for the audits were Engel, O'Brien, Demers, Day-Covert, Regional Supervisor Mike Lafond, Regional Supervisor Tony Burns, Internal Audit Supervisor Mark Stone, and Internal Auditor Ann Marie Hartshorn. Store #6 employees were not notified that these audits were to take place and they occurred after store business hours. Demers stated that at the time of the first audit the Store #6 backroom was disorganized and that it was difficult to maneuver around. Following the first audit a report was produced of the results which showed a significant number of errors in that first count. Demers characterized the results of the first audit as a "complete mess" and attributed the issues to the "total chaos" of Store #6 at the time. In addition, the result of the first audit showed that the vast majority of wine product codes listed in Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet had not been counted during the audit. A document provided by Demers to investigators showed that only ten product codes that were listed on Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet were located and counted during the course of the first audit. It should be stressed that these products were supposed to be in Store #6 as had been noted on Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet because they were either items that had been planned for the new set or that were designated backroom only or for the Eurocave. It should also be noted that a second document was also produced by Demers that listed ten wine product codes that were found during this audit but that were reportedly not in the store's electronic inventory or even on the sale tag spreadsheet created by Inkpen. The wine found that fell into this category totaled thirty bottles. While this might potentially create a third issue of excess wine, a review by investigators of product transfers to Store #6 discovered that these bottles of wine had been transferred to Store #6 from Store #38 during that time but were not recorded as received by Store #6 until December 8, 2011, and the transfer was properly recorded in the Liquor Commission's electronic inventory system.

During the audit that occurred December 7, 2011, Engel discovered twelve bottles of product code 466 that had been marked to be held for then-Commissioner Mark Bodi. Engel reported that after the audit the twelve bottles of product code 466 were no longer present in Store #6. The discovery of product code 466 on December 7, 2011, its connection to a commissioner, and its subsequent transfer out Store #6 after the first audit was used by many, especially Engel, as evidence to bolster the conclusion which was presented to Chairman Mollica that something nefarious had occurred at Store #6 regarding the movement of product and therefore that the wine which was not accounted for in the electronic inventory had disappeared.

However, on December 9, 2011, those twelve bottles of product code 466 had been transferred from Store #6 to Store #76 according to store transfer and inventory documentation provided by Demers. This documentation showed that the transfer was not initiated by Bodi or any Store #6 employees but rather by Wine Marketing Program Assistant Margo Bartz who works out of the Concord headquarters, and that the required paperwork existed documenting the transfer. In addition, Inkpen's Master List as of December 1, 2011, noted the twelve bottles of product code 466 as present in the store's inventory as an item that was new since new item ordering had been turned off. Therefore, product code 466 was tracked and present in the Store #6 inventory and was appropriately transferred out of Store #6 and sent to Store #76 in the timeframe between the two audits in December.¹² When presented with this information Engel stated that he was unaware that the transfer of product code 466 had been approved and ordered by Bartz.

Due to the problematic results of the first audit, a decision was made to conduct a second unannounced audit on December 15, 2011. According to Demers, in the interim, Store #6 was ordered to clean up their backroom by Engel and O'Brien. Demers stated that during the second audit the Store #6 backroom was better organized and as a result the second audit produced a much more accurate bottle count. Nevertheless, Demers stated to investigators that the second audit again did not locate the vast majority of the product codes listed on Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet.

New Store #6 Management

In mid-December, Brown was transferred out of Store #6 and reassigned to Store #41 in Seabrook. Her transfer was not as a result of the alleged missing liquor, but rather was the result of an incident that occurred when Chairman Mollica visited Store #6 shortly after the store move. Chairman Mollica stated that he had been in Store #6 with the Liquor Commission Real Estate Manager Andy Davis and was speaking with Brown and she stated to him, while customers were present, "I wish we were back in the old f store." Chairman Mollica stated that he found Brown's statement completely unacceptable considering it was made while customers were present. Therefore, the day following his visit, Chairman Mollica told Engel that Brown had made this statement and was obviously under a lot of stress and told Engel that Brown was to be moved to another store.

Beginning in January of 2012, Matthew Couture was assigned to cover Store #6 as the manager. Couture managed Store #6 through March of 2012, when Dubois took over as the full-time manager. During his time at Store #6 Couture stated that he was tasked with organizing the backroom area of the store. He stated that in mid-January of 2012 he discovered approximately 30 to 40 cases of product that were not planned for the store's shelf set or should have been transferred out, as well as product that was designated for licensees only that also was not approved for the shelf set. He specifically recalled that there were a number of bottles on the "L"-shaped shelf in the backroom that were not part of the shelf set at Store #6. Couture stated that he set about organizing these products and many were transferred or put out on the retail shelves. As manager Couture he had the autonomy to determine that a product that was not part of the shelf set should nevertheless be made available to retail customers and he was able to go into the system, print a product caption, and put the item on the retail shelf. Couture stated that during his time as manager at Store #6 he was able to whittle the excess product down significantly and that it was a point of pride for him that he had been able to deal with that issue due to the large amount of product that had been present that was not part of the shelf set.

When Dubois began as manager, Couture remained in Store #6 for approximately two weeks to bring him up to speed with the issues he had been working to rectify. Couture and Dubois created a handwritten list of product codes where the electronic inventory was not consistent with the physical product they were seeing in the store and they worked through that list with Day-Covert in an effort to correct any system based inventory issues. Couture stated that these inventory issues all amounted to there being more physical product in the store than the electronic inventory was tracking. None of the inventory issues he discovered involved missing product.

Enforcement Bureau Investigation

Due to the results of the first audit and the discovery that product code 466 had been transferred out of Store #6, the issues regarding the excess/missing wine codes and product code 466 were referred to the Liquor Enforcement Bureau for investigation. Deputy Chief Scott Dunn stated that he was contacted by Commissioner Milligan on Friday, December 9, 2011, at approximately 9:00 pm or 10:00 pm, and informed that there was an ongoing administrative investigation into issues that had arisen during the Store #6 move and that he was now asking the Enforcement Bureau to open a criminal investigation. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that Commissioner Milligan reported that there had been excess wine product in Store #6 that had gone missing and also that wine had been set aside for Commissioner Bodi in Store #6 to be held for him until it went on sale and that wine had subsequently left the store. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that at no time was he provided with a bottle or case count on the excess wine nor was he given an estimated value. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that he also spoke with Engel regarding these issues but he was not given any more details and again, he was not given a bottle or case count and he was not given an estimated value of the excess product. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that he does not know why media reports have stated that 300 cases went missing with an estimated value of $100,000.00, because from the beginning of the Enforcement Bureau investigation, he was told that no bottle count or inventory of the excess wine had ever been conducted.

Chief Eddie Edwards was away on a vacation at the time Commissioner Milligan contacted Deputy Chief Dunn to request that a criminal investigation be opened. Upon his return to the office in mid-December, he was briefed by Deputy Chief Dunn and provided with the two main allegations: (1) there was excess wine product discovered during the Store #6 move that later went missing; and (2) wine had been set aside for Commissioner Bodi at Store #6 and was being held for him at his request until it went on sale. Chief Edwards stated that he was not given a bottle or a case count for the missing wine and he was not given an estimated value for the missing product. It was Chief Edwards's understanding that there had not been an inventory conducted of the excess wine prior to its disappearance and rather, it was reported that approximately 200 codes had been problematic.

Chief Edwards stated that because one of the allegations concerned an active commissioner he instructed Deputy Chief Dunn to stop his investigation and to meet with the local County Attorney's Office and request investigative assistance. Chief Edwards stated that he issued this order because he wanted an outside agency involved in investigating the allegations regarding Commissioner Bodi. A report written by Enforcement Bureau Investigator Cameron Brown corroborates this statement. Investigator Brown's report stated that on December 21, 2011, he was informed that Senior Command Staff had suspended any further investigation on the case until the Rockingham County Attorney's Office was brought in due to the allegations that a member of the commission was somehow involved.

Deputy Chief Dunn stated that he set up a meeting with the Rockingham County Attorney's Office through Investigator Arthur Wiggin and that the meeting occurred on January 6, 2012. Contrary to the statements of Deputy County Attorney Reid and Assistant County Attorney Patricia Conway, Deputy Chief Dunn stated that the only topic of discussion during the meeting was the Store #6 investigation and that they had not discussed an ongoing case out of Plaistow as the County Attorney's Office had recalled. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that the discussion focused on the allegations against Bodi related to product code 466 and that the missing wine, while mentioned, was not the focus of the discussion. He stated that he did not bring an investigative file nor did he provide those present from the County Attorney's Office with any paperwork or materials related to the investigation.

Deputy Chief Dunn stated that in meeting with the County Attorney's Office, his focus was on the allegations concerning Commissioner Bodi and the movement of the case of wine. Deputy Chief Dunn stated he discussed the matter with Deputy County Attorney Thomas Reid who had opined that he did not see the issue as criminal but asked questions about whether or not Commissioner Bodi would have the power unilaterally to put the product on sale, whether the case of wine that was at the Portsmouth store was the last available in the state, and whether other individuals would also be able to request that product be shipped to a particular store. Deputy County Attorney Reid told Deputy Chief Dunn that if they developed more information on those topics, they should bring the file to the County Attorney's Office. Deputy County Attorney Reid also stated that if the matter was not criminal but was perhaps an ethical issue, that the County Attorney's Office would not investigate the ethical matter. Deputy Chief Dunn stated that based on those questions he briefed Chief Edwards on those issues and the County Attorney's position. Thereafter, the Enforcement Bureau discovered that the case of product code 466 that had been at Store #6 was not the only remaining product in the State, that to put an item on sale required a majority vote of the entire Commission¹³, and that any customer could request that a product be shipped or transferred to a particular store and that such requests are regularly filled. Thereafter, according to Deputy Chief Dunn he and Chief Edwards concluded, albeit reluctantly, that the matter was not criminal and Chief Edwards took on the responsibility of discussing with the Commissioners any policy changes that might arise as a result.

Chief Edwards stated during his interview with investigators that he had discussed ordering product to be shipped to a certain store with Chairman Mollica and that Chairman Mollica stated that in the past he had product moved or transferred to a store so that he could purchase it. In speaking with investigators Chairman Mollica confirmed that while a member of the Commission he has requested that product be transferred to a specific store so that he could then purchase the product. Chairman Mollica distinguished this practice, which he described as a service provided to any customer, from the allegation against Bodi, which is that he had the product code 466 held for him until such time as it went on sale. Chief Edwards also spoke with Commissioner Milligan who stated that he was not initially aware that this was common practice but had later been told that it was normal for product to be transferred for customers, including commissioners. In speaking with investigators, Commissioner Milligan also stated that he had product transferred to a specific store so that he could purchase the product. Commissioner Milligan also stated that any customer can make such a request of the Commission. In addition, had Chief Edwards asked then-Commissioner Bodi about product code 466 and whether he had it transferred to Store #6 and Bodi admitted that he had made such a request.

Both Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Milligan stated to investigators that in the months following the Store #6 move they asked Chief Edwards for updates on the progress of the investigation. They both stated Chief Edwards was asked to provide updates during weekly senior staff meetings during this timeframe. They both recalled that Chief Edwards stated a number of times that the Rockingham County Attorney's Office was reviewing the case. They also both recalled that at some point Chief Edwards stated that the Rockingham County Attorney's Office had concluded its review and that they had found no crime occurred. They both stated that Chief Edwards then told them that the Enforcement Bureau was then finishing their investigation and he would provide that to the Commissioners when it was completed. Chief Edwards stated to investigators that he never told Chairman Mollica or Commissioner Milligan that the County Attorney's Office had a case file and was in the process of reviewing a case file. Chief Edwards stated he did relay to Chairman Mollica and Commissioner Milligan that the County Attorney's Office did not think any criminal conduct had occurred but was adamant he never represented to them that the Rockingham County Attorney's Office was in possession of a file and was reviewing that file over a period of time.

Chief Edwards stated that he later provided the Enforcement Bureau's investigative report to the Commissioners along with his executive summary in April of 2012. In the executive summary attached to the investigative file, Chief Edwards concluded that no criminal conduct occurred. See Appendix A (Enforcement Bureau Executive Summary). He stated that he was unaware that the commissioners were not satisfied with the report and only learned of their dissatisfaction after receiving notification that Chairman Mollica had stated on WMUR that the investigation was being forwarded to the Attorney General's Office and that he was not pleased with the Enforcement Bureau's report.

Contrary to the assertion made by Commissioner Mollica in his interview with investigators, when questioned Chief Edwards specifically stated that he would not, and had not "covered" for former Commissioner Bodi or done him any favors in compiling the executive summary which concluded that no criminal acts occurred. Chief Edwards was vehement in this denial. He stated that had his investigation uncovered any information that had been discussed with the County Attorney's Office; he would have proceeded and pursued criminal charges if appropriate. He stated that he reached the conclusion that the issue with Commissioner Bodi and product code 466 was not a criminal matter solely based on the information obtained by his investigators and the discussion Deputy Chief Dunn had with the County Attorney's Office.

Liquor Commission/Warehouse Shrinkage

CFO Tsiopras confirmed that the Liquor Commission did not show losses over and above their average for the 2012 fiscal year which included December of 2011. Specifically, Tsiopras stated to investigators that annual shrinkage for the Liquor Commission amounts to two-tenths of one percent and that nothing abnormal appeared in the balance sheets for the final quarter of 2011. Chairman Mollica similarly stated that the Liquor Commission's annual shrinkage statewide is approximately one half of one percent of the Commission's sales and there was nothing glaring about the numbers for the last quarter of 2011. Demers made the same statement to investigators and further elaborated that Store #6 did not show any additional losses of a significant amount of product or additional significant monetary losses in the $100,000.00 range. In addition, Liquor Commission Accounts Receivable Manager Cassandra Denoncourt, who audits daily financials for the Commission stated to investigators that Store #6 did not show anything out of the ordinary as far as its monetary overages and shortages during the timeframe of the move. Brian Law the owner of Law Warehouses which holds and ships the majority of wine product in the state prior to it arriving at the Liquor Commission's stores similarly confirmed that his warehouse did not show any losses of wine product over and above their normal shrinkage for their 2012 fiscal year which included December of 2011.

Store #6 Alarm Issues

As previously discussed, at the time of the Store #6 move, Store #68 in North Hampton was also preparing for a move. In addition to the movement of product, a store move also requires that the store's alarm system be transferred to the new store location. Program Assistant for Store Operations Charline Everson is responsible for working with the Liquor Commission's alarm company, Total Security, when a store moves. When interviewed by investigators Everson stated that during the time of the Store #6 move she received a number of phone calls from Store #6 and Store #68 employees complaining that there were issues with the alarm and that they were receiving repeated phone calls from the alarm company. Everson discovered that the alarm company had inadvertently flipped the call back lists for Store #6 and Store #68 and so the wrong employees were getting called by the alarm company when issues arose. In addition, Everson noted that during store moves there are often alarm issues because of the extended hours that are involved in moving product. The store alarm system is set up so that it can only properly be activated within one hour following the store's closing time and deactivated within one hour prior to the store's opening time. If the alarm is activated or deactivated outside of those time frames, the alarm company will record that the store "did not close", or "did not open". The alarm company will then contact the employees on their call list to determine what the issue was. It is important to note that the "did not close" or "did not open" notations do not mean that the store's alarm was not activated or deactivated, rather it simply means that the activation or deactivation occurred outside of the allotted time frame. These codes therefore are different from the "burglary" code which is reported if motion alarms within the store are tripped at a time when the alarm is active.

In running the Store #6 alarm reports, Everson noted that for a time period from November 30, 2011 to December 2, 2011, the Store #6 alarm system went off line. The alarm company report for Store #6 indicated that on Wednesday, November 30, 2011 (the first day of the move) the store showed a "did not close" code at 8:03 pm. Store #6's normally closes at 7:00 pm on Wednesdays, so this code is consistent with the store being closed and the alarm being activated after its allotted post-closing time frame. The alarm report then showed no activity for Thursday, December 1, 2011 (the second day of the move). Everson stated that she researched this issue and had spoken with the alarm company at the time and learned that the problem did not originate with the store. That is, the store had not failed to activate the alarm that day, rather the alarm company had experienced a programming issue on their end. The alarm company's report showed the Store #6 alarm back online on Friday, December 2, 2011 (the final day of the move). Thereafter, the alarm code report showed nothing out of the ordinary. While there are "did not close" codes that appeared and even "burglary" codes that appeared, they are each consistent with the store opening and closing at regularly scheduled times and with the employees learning the alarm system in the new store. In addition, Everson stressed that the alarm issues were not hidden or unknown at the time of the move and that Store #6 employees were constantly contacting her in an effort to have the problems fixed with the alarm company.

Conclusion

This investigation has revealed that two separate issues arose during the move: (1) there was a significant amount of excess product present in Store #6 and tracked though inventory but which was not planned for the new set and therefore did not have associated product captions; and (2) erroneously sorted sale tags which were believed to represent products that were physically present in the store. These two issues were merged by those present during the Store #6 move, particularly O'Brien, Engel, Brown, and Inkpen, all of whom were seeing a significant amount of product that could not be matched to a product caption on the retail shelves at the same time O'Brien and Inkpen were searching inventory records for some indication as to why the sale tags Brown had sorted did not have matching product captions.

Therefore, it was communicated to Chairman Mollica, by Engel, that there was a significant amount of excess product and that the excess product had been recorded in the color-coded spreadsheet created by Inkpen. When the color-coded spreadsheet was emailed to Brassard and then forwarded to Demers and Day-Covert it was similarly treated as if it were a list of the excess product. The matter was further complicated when the December 7, 2011 audit did not locate wine for the vast majority of the product codes listed on Inkpen's color-coded sale tag spreadsheet. This audit result, and Engel's concern about the movement of product code 466 due to his lack of awareness that the transfer had been appropriately conducted and approved, resulted in a mistaken conclusion that a large amount of product, as represented by Inkpen's color-coded spreadsheet, had gone missing. Thus, on December 9, 2011, the matter was referred to the Enforcement Bureau for a criminal investigation prior to the second audit. At that point, there was no attempt made by anyone who had been involved in the move to ascertain what had happened. Once the matter was referred to the Enforcement Bureau, all administrative inquiry stopped.

The Attorney General's investigation revealed that there were 2,254 bottles of wine that were not included in the new set list and did not have product captions on the retail shelves. This wine was viewed as excess due to a lack of understanding of Store's 6 inventory by Engel and a lack of communication on the part of Heins and Inkpen. Had Heins and Inkpen explained that these products, while they did not have product captions, were nevertheless accounted for in the Master List produced on December 1, 2011, this issue might have been resolved very quickly. However, rather than communicate during the move that no one should be alarmed if they come across products that do not have corresponding product captions, both Inkpen and Heins were swept into dealing with the sale tag issue that Brown had created. Had Brown, knowing that it was her first time sorting the wine sale tags, chosen to compare the tags to a list of the store's actual inventory; the erroneously sorted sale tag issue would have similarly been avoided.

None of this happened and instead these two issues were merged. Inkpen and O'Brien were dumbfounded that the sale tag products were not in the store's electronic inventory because they saw a large amount of product that did not correspond to a product caption on the retail shelves. During their interviews with investigators Engel, Brown, and O'Brien all discussed the product placed on the backroom shelves as if it were the product that was listed in Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet. While it is understandable that Brown's insistence that these sale tag products were present was accepted as sincere, due to her knowledge as a long-serving employee in that store, no real investigation was done that was aimed at getting to the root of the issue. All that was done was that Inkpen and Brown conducted what they referred to as a "spot-check," but they do not agree on what they had been spot-checking. Brown believed she had searched for and found products that were included in the new set list. Brown stated she had a copy of the new set list and that Inkpen did as well and that she believed that the product codes Inkpen was asking her to search for were from that list. This was her understanding because she recalled that when she found a bottle she placed it with its corresponding product caption on the retail shelves. Product captions were only created for products that were included in the new set list. Inkpen believed that she had asked Brown to search for products listed on the color-coded sale tag spreadsheet and recalled that Brown located individual bottles for some, but not all, of the product codes she had asked her to search for. The assertion that Brown could locate individual bottles of wine in what was, by all accounts, a horribly disorganized backroom area, when she was only provided with a code number and individual bottles are not marked with a code number, strains credulity. Nevertheless, even if this assertion is accepted as true, when pressed, Inkpen stated that of the approximately twenty codes that were spot-checked she could only specifically recall Brown showing her a single bottle of a Korbel product. Inkpen stated that Brown reported that this bottle corresponded with the code that Inkpen had referred to, but it also could have just as easily been one of the other three Korbel products present and planned for the new set. What is most troubling about this spot-check is that Inkpen made no notations on her spreadsheet that would indicate that a particular product had been physically located. In addition, neither Inkpen nor Brown stated that if Brown found a bottle of a particular product, Brown would segregate it on the backroom shelves. Inkpen stated that Brown would put the bottle back where she had found it, and, as discussed above, Brown stated that she would put the bottle with its corresponding product caption on the retail shelves.

No one checked to see if the bottles of excess wine that were placed on the backroom shelf corresponded to the product codes listed on Inkpen's sale tag spreadsheet, rather, it was simply assumed that they were the same. This makes very little sense because throughout the course of the move, the 2,254 bottles of wine that were not included in the new set that were initially in shopping carts and on the backroom shelf were being whittled down to approximately 100-200 bottles by the end of the move. Both Heins and Brown stated that Heins had created room for many of these products on the retail shelves and had ordered and received additional product captions during the move. Based on the Master List spreadsheet there would have been room on the retail shelves for additional products because many of the wine products that had been planned for the new set had nevertheless been sold through and were not present at the time of the move. The product that Heins cut in to the retail shelves was, for the most part, later counted during the December 7, 2011 audit as well as the December 15, 2011 audit. This investigation also revealed that this product was later sold in the store. Therefore, the product mistakenly viewed as excess never disappeared but rather remained in the backroom, was put on the store's retail shelves or was transferred out of the store.

This is further confirmed by Couture who managed Store #6 following the move. He recognized that there was a significant amount of excess product in the store's backroom as well as on the backroom shelves that was not part of the store's set. Couture worked diligently to find space for that excess product on the retail shelves or to transfer that product to other liquor stores. In addition, while Couture discovered some discrepancies between the electronic inventory and the store's physical inventory, they each showed that the store had more product on hand than the electronic inventory showed. Again, in dealing with this excess product he worked with Dubois to get it onto the retail shelves or to transfer it to other stores. Couture's experience in Store #6 makes clear that the excess product that was present at the time of the store move remained in the store for several months following the move and never disappeared.

Finally, although it has been reported and repeatedly stated that 300 cases of wine went missing from Store #6 and that the missing wine was uniformly high-end and valued at approximately $100,000.00 as discussed above, there is no evidence to support these statements. While Chairman Mollica is clear that Engel told him that approximately 300 cases of wine were found peppered through the store inventory at the time of the move, Engel denied making that statement in his interviews with both State Police and the Enforcement Bureau. Deputy Chief Dunn reported that when the issue was first referred to him, he was never given a bottle count or a case count and that no value was ascribed to the wine. Chief Edwards reported the same thing. In addition, both Brassard and Demers expressed that they had no idea how those numbers were arrived at because when they were provided with the sale tag spreadsheet they both correctly noted that it did not have a count associated with the product codes and that the wines listed ranged in value significantly. Most importantly, no one that was in the store at the time of the move reported seeing 300 cases that they considered to be excess nor did anyone report seeing excess product that was uniformly high-end. Rather, all employees maintained that by the end of the move, there were 100-200 bottles of a variety of wine product which ended up on the backroom shelves because the bottles did not have corresponding product captions on the retail shelves. No one was able to provide an estimated value for these wines. Accordingly, the widespread report that 300 cases of high-end wine valued at approximately $100,000.00 is not supported by any statement or evidence obtained during the course of this investigation. The only instance in which approximately 300 cases were mentioned was by Chairman Mollica who stated he had been told that number by Engel.

As discussed, the excess wines that did not have product captions, and which were whittled down to 100-200 bottles by the end of the store move, was accounted for in the store's electronic inventory and remained present until later sold or transferred. The wines listed on Inkpen's color-coded spreadsheet were not a record of these wines but rather were a record of the erroneously sorted sale tags. These sale tag codes were never compared to the excess wines placed on the backroom shelf. In addition, there is no evidence that the wines listed on this sale tag spreadsheet and for which no inventory record could be found, were actually physically present in Store #6 at the time of the move. Thus, no wine product went missing from Store #6. This conclusion is further confirmed because neither the Liquor Commission nor the Law Warehouse shows losses over and above what is normal and acceptable product shrinkage. Accordingly, there is no evidence that there were 300 cases of high-end wine present in Store #6 that subsequently went missing, nor is there any evidence that any wine went missing during the Store #6 move. Therefore, there is no evidence that any criminal conduct occurred during the Store #6 move in early December of 2011.

Allegations Relative to Inventory Controls

Executive Investigative Summary
April 17, 2012

An investigation commenced following several Liquor Commission employees reporting inventory discrepancies. The investigation was conducted by the Division of Liquor Enforcement & Licensing, Special Investigations Unit (SIU). SIU evaluated documented and verbal evidence to establish whether legal standards such as causation, intention and admissibility in court of similar proceedings had been met. Much of the evidence or information is contradictory, ambiguous or unsupported. Examples include the following:

- a) Capricious allegations by senior level Commission staff members – Commissioner Bodi was accused of having product moved to Store 6 for him to purchase at a later date. The investigation revealed that his request was consistent with similar requests made by other Commissioners, licensees and customers. To the best of my knowledge, there is no law or rule that prohibits this practice.
- b) Poorly conducted initial administrative investigation into product inventory controls displayed a lack of competency – Store Operations Supervisor Peter Engel and Human Resources Administrator Kelly Matthews failed to take comprehensive notes and witness statements and failed to isolate questionable inventory. Matthews has clearly stated during prior investigations conducted by the Division of Enforcement and NH State Police that she had not been trained to conduct such investigations. Investigations are not simply interviews. There are several additional areas of concern listed below:

Store #6 Critical Areas of Concern

12/09/12

Report from Commissioner Milligan regarding inventory discrepancies at Store #6; originally reported approximately 10 days earlier. Administrative investigation conducted by human resources and store operations. Allegations include Commissioner Bodi transferring product to store #6 until the product is placed on sale by the commission. Allegedly Commissioner Bodi was going to purchase the product when the commission approved the product for sale. Other allegations include an extraordinary amount of excessive product that should not be located at this store.

12/13/2011-HEINZE AFFIDAVIT FOR TASTING, TRANSFER EMAIL FOR PRODUCT CODE 466 (BODI PRODUCT) AND 3 COMPLETED AND POSTDATED CHECKS TO NHSLC

Arrived at Store 6-Janice Brown interviewed. Support documents from Janice RE: Affidavit # 23946 (Gordon Heins-Bad Taste), email dated 12/7/2011 @ 2:43 PM from Margo Bartz (Wine marketing Program Assistant) requesting transfer of product code 466 to Store 76, review of signed and 3 completed and postdated checks to NH Liquor Commission from licensee, Café Mediterraneo in store safe for arranged payment plan set up by licensee, Store 6 and Cassandra Denoncourt.

1/18/2012-CONSTELLATION WINE IDENTIFIES WINE IN STORE NOT IN STORE INVENTORY.

PRODUCT STORED IN BACK OF STORE UNTIL INFORMATION REVIEWED .

Inv. Brown met with Nicole Inkpen (Formerly TERZOPOLOUS) of Constellation Wines at Enforcement HQ to further discuss inventory issues at Store 6. Inkpen is the strategic Account Manager for Constellation Wines and is responsible for creating floor plans and shelf sets with the NH Liquor Commission. Inkpen recounted that she took an electronic snapshot of the inventory at Store 6 (Via Mapper) to further assist with product movement to the new Store 6 location. On the day of the move, she stated there was product being transferred to the new store location that was not listed as being intended for use in the new set. In checking the codes on these bottles, it was discovered that these products were not listed in the store inventory. She and Nicole Brassard agreed to have the disputed product stored in the back until it could be reviewed.

1/19/2012-WINES ARE AFFIDAVIT FOR TASTING BY HEINZ DUE TO CUSTOMER COMPLAINTS.

Inv. Brown met with Nicole Brassard at Commission HQ to discuss her knowledge of the inventory issues at Store 6. Brassard indicated that prior to the move, Janice Brown of Store 6 and Gordon Heins advised her that the store to store transfers had been completed but there were a lot of bottles remaining that were not part of the new sets at the new store location. Brassard told Brown to secure the product in the back room to segregate the product to deal with it after. Brassard believed that Peter Engel, Rick O'Brien, Nicole Terzopolos as well as Janice Brown and Gordon Heins saw a lot of product not in the new set. Brassard was aware of subsequent inventories that were conducted at Store 6 but was unaware of the results. When asked about the Affidavit process, Brassard acknowledged that she often directed Gordon Heins to Affidavit a product based upon a complaint of taste or appearance by another employee or customer.

1/25/2012-IDENTIFIED EXCESSIVE PRODUCT PLACED ON SALE OR TRANSFERRED TO OTHER STORES FOR SALE.

Interview conducted with Randy Durling at Store 6 in Portsmouth. He was unaware of the particulars of the situation but knew there was a discrepancy in the store inventory. Durling indicated that the product in question was either placed out back on the metal shelves, sold until gone or transferred to another store for final sale closeout. Checked random codes: 28580-No Electronic Inventory Record for past 6 months but item present. A check of the shelf revealed no such product on site. Next code checked: 34431, although this product notation was the same as the previous code, this item was located on a shelf on the sales floor. Photographs taken on site.

1/26/2012-HR CONDUCTS ADMINISTRATIVE INVESTIGATION AND DOES NOT "TAKE NOTES."

Inv. Brown interviewed HR Director Kelly Matthews at Liquor Commission HQ to further discuss her interview of Janice Brown. Matthews indicated that she might have taken notes during the second interview but not during the first interview with Brown. Inv. Brown asked for a copy of those notes to which Matthews indicated that she did not have them readily available but that she would look for them and provide a copy. Matthews indicated that Peter Engel was present during these interviews.

1/26/2012- ENGEL DENIES EVER TELLING COMMISSION 300 CASES WERE MISSING

Inv. Brown interviewed Peter Engel at Liquor Commission HQ. Inv. Brown asked specific questions per Director Edwards. When Engel was asked if he had told the NH Liquor Commissioners that there were 300 cases missing from Store 6, Peter Engel stated, "No." He went on to say that there was a conversation about the most recent inventory results and that "maybe Tina or somebody came up with those numbers." When asked about the issue of blank checks from Café Med was brought to his attention, Engel indicated that Regional Supervisor Mike Lafond had observed the checks with handwritten notes, dates and amounts of money while assisting with the store move. Engel found it to be very suspicious that NHSLC store employees would be engaged in any financial dealings with a license. Engel was not aware that this process was made with prior agreement between NHSLC Accounts Receivable-Cassandra Denoncourt, licensee and Store 6 employees. Engel indicated that he did not approve of such a process. When Engel was asked about the transfer of Janice Brown to Store 41 from Store 6, he indicated that she was transferred due to the mess at Store 6 and wanted to bring in experienced managers to remedy situation. When asked about the two interviews Engel was involved in with Matthews and Janice Brown, Engel acknowledged that he had taken notes. When asked for a copy, Engel indicated that he would have to look for them and when he found them he would send them to Inv. Brown.

1/27/2012- NO INVENTORY CONDUCTED WHEN COUNT WAS INCORRECT

Peter Engel was contacted regarding inventory issues at Store 6. When asked specifically how many bottles of product he observed at Store 6 that were unaccounted for, Engel stated that he saw four to eight actual bottles and further recognized that there were over one hundred product codes as being problematic. No inventory was performed at Store 6 to obtain an actual count of bottles not codes as being problematic. Engel never instructed any employee to perform an inventory at Store 6. He indicated that an inventory was performed in the first week of December. When asked the results of that inventory, he told Inv. Brown to contact Tina Demers as she would have that information.

1/28/2012-LAFOND NEVER OBSERVED BLANK CHECKS. OBSERVED EXCESSIVE PRODUCT BUT DID NOT CONDUCT INVENTORY

Regional Supervisor Mike Lafond contacted Inv. Brown. Lafond acknowledge he found some hand written notes about Café Med at Store 6 and found it odd. He never made an observation of blank checks. He recounted seeing 100-200 bottles as being set aside. No inventory completed to ascertain the exact issue. Lafond did not know the results of the inventory completed during the first week of December 2011.

1/30/2012-BROWN DID NOT CONDUCT AN INVENTORY AFTER DISCREPANCIES IDENTIFIED

Inv. Brown completed interview with Janice Brown. Janice reported seeing fifty to 100 bottles not accounted for on the metal shelf in the back area. She was aware of over 100 product codes as being problematic. She was surprised at some of the codes reported as problematic as she recognized them to be items she routinely carried at Store 6. She was not aware of any inventory conducted to validate the problematic codes. As the Asst. Store Manager, she did not order an inventory to be completed. Janice Brown told Peter Engel during the interview with him and Kelly Matthew that she recognized a code on the list he provided her during the meeting as one she had in Store 6 at that time. Janice Brown became emotional stating, "I am innocent, I have done nothing wrong and I want to prove that." From a list Inv. Brown had, Janice Brown recognized five of the problematic codes as being an item the old Store 6 location carried.

1/30/2012-O'BRIEN DID NOT CONDUCT INVENTORY AFTER DISCREPANCIES IDENTIFIED.

Contact was made with Rick O'Brien. Rick O'Brien recalled seeing fifty to 100 actual bottles on the metal shelf in the rear room that were unaccounted for. He also was aware of over 100 product codes that were problematic. O'Brien did not perform an inventory to obtain actual bottles counts versus code counts nor did he instruct anyone to do an inventory. O'Brien indicated that two inventories were done in December but he did not know the results. He went on to say that the usual process was to count the store twice for each inventory but that they only counted the store once on December 1, 2011 and then once more on December 8, 2011. O'Brien stated that after the two full inventories the usual process is to then perform adjustments to set a starting point to move forward from. O'Brien felt that the current results were possibly not accurate because "they" did not do the adjustments. O'Brien was unable to advise why this was not done and that a decision of that nature was outside the scope of his authority. He suggested I speak with current Store 6 Manager Matt Couture.

1/30/2012-HEINZ ACKNOWLEDGED UTILIZING THE AFFIDAVIT PROCESS FOR TASTING

PRODUCT WHEN INSTRUCTED BY JOHN BUNNELL OR NICOLE BRASSARD.

Sgt. Hutchins and Inv. Brown completed a follow up interview with Gordon Heins at Enforcement HQ. He provided a written statement based on the previous interview conducted by Sgt. Hutchins. He was provided with a list of the questions asked by Sgt. Hutchins to assist in his writing a statement. Heins did not recall the physical number of bottles as being problematic at Store 6 but knew there were about 150 codes that were problematic. Heins acknowledge that he utilized the Affidavit process for tasting of product when instructed usually by John Bunnell or Nicole Brassard. This was based on customer complaints of bad taste or color. Although he was unaware of any fraudulent Affidavit activity, Heins recognized that there should be a hard policy on the Affidavit process because there are no regulations to control the use. He recalled an Affidavit at Store 6 that he previously did not disclose.

1/31/2012-ALL TRANSFERS REGARDING CODE 466 APPEAR TO BE APPROPRIATE

12:30 PM Sgt. Hutchins completed follow up with Margo Bartz regarding product transfer from Store 6, Store 6 and Store 76 on product code 466. In addition to an interview, documented records regarding the transfer of this product and others to these stores was forwarded by Margo Bartz. All appeared in order with regard to Code 466. See 11-538-OF for further on Code 466.

2/2/2012-BRASSARD CORROBORATED HEINZ STATEMENT REGARDING AFFIDAVIT FOR TASTINGS.

Inv. Brown met with Nicole Brassard at Enforcement HQ. Brassard indicated that Gordon Heins is instructed maybe 5 or 6 times a year to take product by Affidavit due to complaints. Brassard indicated either John Bunnell or herself would direct Gordon Heins to do this. Her statements corroborated Heins' previous statements.

2/2/2012-O'BRIEN INDICATED THERE NEEDED TO BE A STRONG POLICY ON HOW AND WHEN AFFIDAVITS ARE USED

Inv. Brown contacted Regional Supervisor Rick O'Brien. O'Brien was contacted in an effort to better understand the Affidavit process as it related to vendors and/or brokers. He indicated that a product would be removed by Affidavit if there was a problem (Bad taste, color complaints) with the product or perhaps due to a problem discovered by the vendor (Wrong year, label etc.). When asked if he could think of any circumstance that would necessitate and/or permit a vendor to remove product from store under Affidavit, O'Brien stated that the only situation he could think of would be when a vendor needed a particular wine for a tasting. He stated in that case, the vendor would pay for the specific amount of bottles removed. He further stated that he did not think that because the vendor was paying for the product there would be little scrutiny of the situation "on our end" (Meaning the Commission). Per O'Brien the Affidavit form is sent to Commission HQ where the product is removed from the store inventory. O'Brien also indicated that there needed to be a strong policy on how and when Affidavits should be used.

Conclusion

For years, the Division of Enforcement & Licensing, through its Special Investigation Unit, has continuously investigated state employees of the Liquor Commission regarding crimes against the State of New Hampshire. This investigation reflects a disturbing common thread in store operations:

- Lack of standardized operational policies;
- Lack of standardized training;
- Lack of senior level accountability;
- Lack of supervision at all levels of store operations;
- Failure to enforce current directives;
- Failure to properly train employees;
- Refusal to adopt modern loss prevention policies;
- Poorly managed structure of store operations;
- Retention of questionable employees

A similar tread has revealed itself within the Liquor Commission's Human Resources unit.

Inevitably, there comes a time, much like this one where alleged misconduct has been reported requiring some sort of action. The initial approach to an investigation plays an important role in gathering facts, sorting details, and reaching a conclusion which guides the Liquor Commission decision making. The Human Resources Unit has demonstrated a continuous lack of fundamental knowledge of handling administrative investigations. Human Resources Unit deficient in skills necessary for conducting proper investigations impacted SIU's opportunities to gathering creditable documentation. When handled poorly at the outset, they become damaged: relevant and adequate information is not properly obtained and recorded, back-tracking often results in mistruths, damaged, destroyed or lost evidence and an unwillingness for witnesses to come forward in good faith prevails. Mismanagement to a process that is so crucial and so necessary to the stewardship of government rises to the level of malfeasance that should not be over-looked.

Recommendation

- If the event being investigated is particularly complex, or not appropriate for investigation by untrained members of the Liquor Commission, the incident should be immediately referred to the Division of Enforcement and Licensing.
- The Liquor Commission should develop policies and procedures for its Human Resources Unit relative to handling and reporting internal investigations.
- The Division of Enforcement and Licensing should brief all senior level Liquor Commission employees regarding lessons learned during the investigation.
